Author a Candidate

NEW ORLEANS — David Chandler, author of a 1970 Life magazine article on the influence of organized crime on the government of Louisiana, said yesterday he is running for governor and will not accept any campaign contributions. Chandler, 36, lives in New Orleans and has been a resident of Louisiana since 1960.

He said he will not accept any campaign contributions because he wants to disprove the theory a candidate needs to spend $1 million to be elected governor of Louisiana. "I'll have more to say later on the issues," Chandler said.

Chandler wrote an article that appeared in an April, 1970, issue of Life charging the Mafia corrupted state government. The article resulted in the creation of a state investigating committee.
